Strengthening Career and Technical Education (aka Perkins V) for the 21st Century
Minnesota State in partnership with Minnesota Department of Education presented on recruiting students of color in Law Enforcement Programs.

- There are 26 consortia in Minnesota
- The Perkins V is funded by federal dollars. The vision, mission, and principles are:
  - Vision: Advancing career and technical education empowers every learner to realize a rewarding career.
  - Mission: Quality career and technical education ensures every learner has equitable access to career-connected learning through a network of knowledgeable partners.
  - Principles: An equity lens for decision-making; Inclusion of all stakeholders; Being bold, innovative and focused on continuous improvement; and Responsiveness to the evolving labor market.
- Perkins V must include recruitment and retention of diverse/special/non-traditional populations and to increase gender equity and racial ethnicity in programs
- The law enforcement and criminal justice typically is considered non-traditional based on gender (predominately male industry).
- The work of Perkins V is about quality programs of study, learner success, workforce development, and economic vitality.
- This is accomplished by programs and services that begin with career exploration and authentic career connected learning for students (e.g. recruitment, retention, support, and development of professional educators).

Action item:
- Taskforce members may send additional questions/concerns/feedback about the presentation to the presenters.

What is anti-racist education?
Dr. Debra Leigh, Interim Vice President for Diversity and Inclusion at St. Cloud Technical and Community College presented to the Taskforce on What is anti-racist education? Her work in this space started with participating in a workshop offered by The People’s Institute of Survival and Beyond out of New Orleans. Her training and growth continued with the Crossroads Antiracism Organizing and Training and Minnesota Collaborative Antiracism Coalition (MCARI).

Dr. Leigh defined and described Antiracism Education as:
- Teaching based on conscious efforts and actions
- Teaches students to rethink systemic power and understand privilege
- Students learn how to act against racism by acknowledging personal privileges, confronting acts of racial discrimination, and working to change personal bias
- It is education that helps students move past “guilt” or “feeling bad” about generations of oppression and encourages them to notice, process, and break down their own racial beliefs
- Teaches students to analyze and reframe how they see the value, worth, and stories of other cultures

Minnesota State is an affirmative action, equal opportunity employer and educator.
• Teaches students about their own identities and sense of place.

In order to effectively implement anti-racist pedagogy, faculty will need to be aware of their social position to begin and continue critical self-reflection. The three components needed:
1. Incorporating the topics of race and inequality into the course content
2. Teaching from an anti-racist pedagogical approach
3. Anti-racist organizing within the campus and lining our efforts to the surrounding community

There are questions educators should ask themselves:
• Will I work to be antiracist? (Self-work)
• Will I continue allowing racism to affect my classroom, school, and community?
• Should I actively take a stand against racism to end racism’s systemic grasp? (Organizing)

Action item:
➢ The presentation will be shared with the Taskforce members.
➢ Dr. Leigh will be invited to come back and present to the Taskforce to expand the discussion on anti-racist education.

Experiential Learning Programs
• Metropolitan State University (MSU) offers degree programs in Criminal Justice and Law Enforcement and a certificate program in law enforcement.

• MSU offers a program called Policing one2one that is an experiential learning program that provides students with real world experiences.

Action item:
➢ Taskforce members may send additional questions/concerns/feedback about the presentation to the faculty or department chair of the program at MSU and/or the Associate Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs.
